

Are you a medical writer or journalist who wants to better understand health research? Want to gain copy material and new skills?

Sign-up for a free workshop

March 14-15, 2019, Washington, D.C.

The National Center for Health Research is an independent, nonprofit think tank focused on medical and public health issues, and does not accept funding from pharmaceutical or medical device companies. Click here for more information about this national workshop, which is funded through a Patient Centered Outcome Research Institute® \(PCORI®\) award.¹

- Learn about groundbreaking new research on prostate cancer, asthma, diabetes, heart attacks, and mental health, showing which treatments are most effective.
- Learn how to evaluate the quality of new studies and how to reconcile conflicting results and conclusions.
- Learn the pros and cons of clinical trials, pragmatic trials, real world evidence, and other types of medical research.
- Workshop training certificates provided.
- Network with medical experts, researchers, journalists, and writers who want to improve communication between researchers and journalists/writers.
- Faculty nationally-respected researchers and award-winning journalists who have written for media outlets such as NYT, NPR, CNN, Bloomberg, JAMA, USA Today, and WSJ.
- Breakfast, lunch, and Happy Hour included.
- Scholarships available for travel expenses and hotel for those living at least 50 miles away.

¹ This workshop is funded by a Patient Centered Outcomes Research Institute® (PCORI®) Eugene Washington PCORI Engagement Award (8598-NCHR). PCORI® is an independent, nonprofit organization authorized by Congress in 2010. Its mission is to fund research that will provide patients, their caregivers, and clinicians with the evidence-based information needed to make better-informed healthcare decisions.